Dear Juliette:

A close friend of mine, who lives near Seattle, WA, has done a great deal of research on government PROPERTY TAKINGS. His name is Jack Venrick. Much of his research has been posted on his website at www.freedomforallseasons.org.

You may be able to find what you are looking for on his site.

Also, Kimmi Lewis of Kim, Colorado is very familiar with the Army's efforts to confiscate most of Southeastern Colorado along with the complicity of the U. S. Government and the Nature Conservancy. Perhaps you know her.

Thank you for contacting the National Association of Rural Landowners and good luck with your project.

Take care,

Ron Ewart, President

Hello

I have been working on a documentary about the Army (Fort Carson) trying to take the southeast corner of Colorado from ranchers since their planning map was leaked in 2006. I want to do an animated USA map to show loss of private property over time. I am hoping the condensing of time will show the alarming and accelerating expansion of government ownership of America.

Can you point me to any source of data regarding the historical taking of private property? I hope to transfer data into a visual illustration.

You can see our struggle at www.pinoncanyon.com. Fort Carson planned to have their first land parcel in 2009. We have managed to block funding for expansion in the Defense spending bill for the past three years. I hope my documentary can help stop an ill conceived plan by showing the government taking/buying of private property, like a metastacizing cancer. I will also be including the role of the Nature Conservancy in this stealth transfer of wealth.

Thank you for your work, your website and your time.
