Growth management by government is plain wrong!
The government planners caused the Soviet Union to collapse. The government planners of growth management in Washington State have lowered the living standard of the people!

The proper people to do growth management are the people all together: the people as consumers and those people who respond to the consumers, such as the owners and the investors and the entrepreneurs and the other business people, all working in response to the constantly changing wants of the consumers as the consumers suggest to them where growth should occur and how high into the sky that growth should be. The consumers should direct growth by what the consumers makes profitable and by what the consumers make unprofitable.

Government elitists should stop telling the consumers that the consumers can't have what they want. Government should stop sabotaging the free market. The competitive free market moves our economy towards balance, whereas the "elite" planners from government move us towards unbalance, frustration, and misery.

We should abolish growth management by government elitists and return to growth management by the consumers in the market place!

Sincerely, Michael G. Nelson, a former candidate
