WASHINGTON – Hundreds of thousands of taxpayers stormed Washington, D.C., today, taking their fight against excessive spending, bailouts, growth of big government and soaring deficits to the front door of the U.S. Capitol.

All week citizens have been heading to the Hill by the busloads for the showdown today. The Tea Party Patriots' "Tea Party Express" national bus tour has been hosting a series of tea parties across the nation. A caravan of buses, speakers and entertainers are en route to Washington, D.C., just in time for the march. The taxpayers have their own way to the event.

The White House said Friday it was unaware of the rally. President Obama traveled to Minneapolis, Minn., to promote his health-care plans.

But so many taxpayers showed up on Pennsylvania Avenue that the White House ran out of room and the march was forced to begin early.

WND was at the scene to get crowd reaction and take photos of the event.

Citizens carried hand-made signs that read:

- 2010: Vote all incumbents out!
- Our Constitution has termites!
- We are under attack by our own government
- Stop the march of socialism

Others, like Laurie Slough of Orlando, Fla., also dressed in costume to demonstrate their message. Slough wore a prison costume and carried a sign that read, "Criminals in Congress, you're judgment day is coming."

WND also noticed many anti-ACORN signs, following the recent controversy in which one of the organization's offices was exposed supporting prostitution and human trafficking.

Fox News reported lines of citizens completely filled Pennsylvania Avenue for blocks. Barbara Espinosa of FreedomWorks estimated at least 450,000 people turned out for the march, according to American Thinker. But Michelle that police are estimating 1.2 million.

"It was wall-to-wall people. I felt like I was in line for Obama he participant Robert Barney of Chesapeake, Va. "It was at least four thousand people."

Organizers have told the media they expect the event to be the la

According to the Washington Times, the "Tea Party Express" tour was the most popular topic searched on Yahoo last week. Joe Wierzbicki, coordinator of the Tea Party Express, told the Times he expected

"We were expecting 25,000 a few weeks ago, but now we are hoping for 50,000," Wierzbicki said.

Several organizations united to help organize the National Taxpayers' March on the Capitol, including: Freedom Works, Grassfire/Resist, Patriots, National Taxpayers Union, Club for Growth, Americans for Job Security, Young Americans for Liberty, Ayn Rand Center for Individual Rights, Country Deserves Better, Campaign for Liberty, Leadership Institute, Young America's Foundation, the National Association of Rural Americans, and Smart Girl Politics.

Brendan Steinhauser of FreedomWorks, one of the groups that organized the event, told WND, "People want to do this. The people who have been ignored around the country want to come to Washington and do this in D.C. ways, they are being ignored and the media is underrepresenting the numbers. They want to come together for one big event and send a message."
