The evil vision and blind ambition of this man
 May have caused the death of Almost 100,000,000 people in World War II.
 Why? The curse of human apathy!

A brief history of Hitler's rise to power can be read in the following link: <http://www2.dsu.nodak.edu/users/dmeier/Holocaust/hitler.html>. It is illuminating in its portrayal of a political vision that one man had and was able to "sell" to a significant segment of the German people, and the parallels to our own American political evolution over the last 70 to 80 years. One of those parallels is the coincidence of the rise to power by Hitler and FDR at precisely the same time, with some very similar economic and political events taking place in both countries. The Great Depression affected most of the world's economies. Many were going hungry and had nothing to lose to subscribe to a political philosophy that would fill their bellies, or their national fervor. Even though Hitler despised Karl Marx's socialism and vowed to eliminate it from the German culture, what he created was a socialist dictatorship. FDR did much the same thing, except that he created a socialist democracy that we live with today.

Meanwhile, those that knew better in both countries, looked the other way.

Here are a few of the planks of the Nazi Party and its influence on the state, taken from the linked article. Some of the similarities between these planks and what exists in America's political climate today, are very troubling.

I. The State

The state is born out of the necessity of ordering the community of the Volk (people) in accordance with certain laws. Its characteristic attribute is power over every branch of the community. The state has the right to demand of every racial comrade [Volksgenosse] that he live according to the law. Whoever violates the laws of the state will be punished. The state has officials to execute its laws and regulations. The constitution of the state is the basis for its legislation. The state embodies power! In the state men of different opinions and different outlook can live beside each other. The state cannot demand that all men be of the same opinion. It can, however, demand that all men observe its laws.

II. The Party

In contrast to the state, the party is the community of men of like opinion. It is born out of the struggle for an ideology. In order to survive this struggle, it gathered together all men who were prepared to fight for this ideology. The ideology is the basis of the order in accordance with which men live within the party. While in the state laws are considered as pressure, obstacles, and difficulties by many citizens, the laws of the party are no burden but rather signify the will of the community. In the state the characteristic is the must; in the party the I will.

III. The Functions of the Party and the State

*(a) It is conceivable that party and state are one and the same thing. This is the case when all racial comrades are converted to the ideology of the party and the laws of the state are the clear expression of the will of the ideology. Then the state becomes the great community of men of like opinion. This ideal situation will only seldom be attained in history. It is, in fact, only conceivable if this ideology is the only basis for the inner attitude and takes complete possession of the people...

(c) If the Volk in all its branches is not impregnated by the party and its ideology, party and state must remain separated. The party will then be an order in which a select group of leaders and fighters is found. The ideology will be carried to the Volk by these fighters. The party shall prepare public opinion and public desire so that the spiritual condition of the Volk shall be in accord with the actual legislation of the state.

Therefore it does not suffice for the party to be an elite, a minority which is bound together in unity. The party has rather the task of accomplishing the political education and the political unification of the German Volk. It accordingly is charged also with the leadership of its associated organizations. In the course of this leadership the party fulfills its primary task: the ideological conquest of the German Volk and the creation of the "Organization of the Volk." The state is a technical instrument to assist in the creation of this community of the people. It is the instrument for the realization of the ideology. The party is, therefore, the primary which constantly refills dead material with life and the will to life.... (our emphasis in bold)

In America today, the ideological conquest of its people is being conducted in a similar manner. Socialism, radical environmentalism and multi-culturalism are being "sold" (propagandized) on the basis of "the common" or "the collective", without regard to the individual, or constitutional rights. "The common" and "the collective" have a greater priority than the individual, or the foundation of our laws, the U. S. Constitution. (Hitler voided Germany's constitution when he took power) These ism's are being forced on the American people by constant repetition in the print and electronic news media for the sole purpose of control and enslavement by propaganda, distortions and lies. The man-caused global warming myth is an all-too-glaring example. Grossly negligent control of our borders is another. In furtherance of this process, the ism's are being codified into American law by lawmakers who have taken on the mindset of protecting "the collective" from all dangers, real or perceived, at any cost to the people, or their rights. There is no free choice as granted by our Constitution, only the mandates of the "state".

Meanwhile, the people who know better, are looking the other way, in abject apathy.

The German and Japanese people paid dearly for their apathy, as did the rest of the world.

We have been and are at the crossroads of what the German people faced in early 1933. Will we allow history to repeat itself, or will we make a course correction before it is too late and another 100,000,000 people will have to die because the people who know, were looking the other way? WE THE PEOPLE of the United States of America can determine our future and the future peace of the world, if we have the will, the strength, the multitudes and the resources to defend constitutional freedom and liberty. Freedom has enemies, both foreign and domestic. If we shrink from the battle on either front, our enslavement, or worse, our annihilation, are all but assured. The rest of the world is looking to the free peoples of America to show the way. The question is, will we, or will we and the rest of the world pay dearly for America's collective apathy?

"THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RURAL LANDOWNERS"

The National Association of Rural Landowners (NARLO) is a non-profit corporation, duly licensed in the State of Washington. It was formed in response to draconian land use ordinances that were passed by King County in Washington State (Seattle) in the late Fall of 2004, after vociferous opposition from rural landowners. NARLO's mission is to begin the long process of restoring, preserving and protecting Constitutional property rights and returning this country to a Constitutional Republic. Government has done a great job of dividing us up into little battle groups where we are essentially impotent at a national level. We will change all that with the noisy voices and the vast wealth tied up in the land of the American rural landowner. The land is our power, if we will just use that power, before we lose it. We welcome donations and volunteers who believe as we do, that government abuses against rural landowners have gone on for far too long and a day of reckoning is at hand. To learn more, visit our website at www.narlo.org.

President Roosevelt, in his 1933 inaugural address said, ".... The only thing we have to fear is fear itself". I maintain that the only thing we have to fear is unbridled government. The only way unbridled government can exist is if WE THE PEOPLE allow it. Unfortunately, we have
