Second, is whether States can legitimately form alliances seeking international recognition by committing to regulatory policy and leveraging of finance to transition the U.S. economy to align with international obligations and goals which have not been established by law, and forge a state-federal partnership to make achievable the NDCs.

3. Third, is whether or not the influence of international financiers and private investors can legitimately influence market investment practices of businesses and governments in such a way to benefit politically-favored sectors while penalize. “
